WHERE TO STAY

Just sixty miles northwest of Los Angeles, you'll find Port Hueneme, the friendly city by the sea. Port Hueneme is the place for travelers looking to dig their toes in the sand, take a long walk, drop a fishing line off the pier or just kick back and relax. With walking and biking trails winding throughout the city and a perfect climate almost year round, you'll revive your soul here along the coast.

Port Hueneme (pronounced 'Wy-nee-mee') is a seaside community nestled between Oxnard and Ventura. It's home to one of only two Naval Construction Battalion Centers in the U.S. and the only deep-water harbor between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Stay Beachside

Wide-open beaches. Epic sunsets. Perfect weather. Port Hueneme is the ideal place to discover the undiscovered. When it comes to choosing the right hotel, you've got plenty of options with a variety of accommodations and price points.

Beach Cruisin'

Hueneme Beach Park is an idyllic Southern California beach located walking or biking distance from most of the local hotels. It's great for families or solo travelers because of the variety of activities offered. The curving walkway along the beachfront is ideal for a relaxing ride on a bike or surrey. This 50-acre park also offers picnic facilities and a 24-hour fishing pier. Enjoy playing in the sand volleyball courts and admiring the historical Alaska Air Flight 261 memorial sundial.

Ride the Waves

Looking for a fun and uncrowded surf spot? Hueneme Beach Park provides decent surf conditions, especially with easterly winds. Waves break both right and left and are best at high tide. Bring your own gear or head to a local outfitter for surfboard and wetsuit rentals. Some can even set up private lessons. So pack your sunscreen and grab a board because surf's up year round in Port Hueneme.

Rest and Revive

In earlier times, Port Hueneme was named Wenemu, meaning "resting place" in the native Chumash language, and it was used as a stop between fishing expeditions. The destination continues to live up to its original name all these years later. Port Hueneme is a place to unwind and revive. Go through the flow of sunrise salutations on the beach or feel the warm breeze touch your face during a sunset meditation. There's sure to be an outdoor experience that fits your style. From heart racing bike rides to casual strolls along the lighthouse promenade walkway or a dip in the ocean, wellness takes on many forms here.

Cast a Line

If you're itching for some good fishing, cast a line from Port Hueneme Pier, where you can enjoy views of Santa Cruz and Anacapa islands and even the occasional passing dolphin or whale. A lesser-known fact about California is that you don't need a fishing license to fish off a pier, so this is an angler's dream come true.
